

Resilience Game

This game explores common scenarios that children may encounter in their day-to-day life at home, or at school.

The game is a simple board game. The children roll the dice and take a card when they land on the appropriate square. The card may give them a direction or an opportunity to make a choice between three options. If they choose the most resilient answer they will move forward two spaces. They will move forward one space for the second most resilient answer, or stay where they are if they choose the least resilient answer. You may need counters and a 1-6 die.

Before starting, discuss the importance of resilience with the children. Resilience is a skill that we can build – it will help us with our mental health, it will help us process emotions, and it will help us make decisions and move forward.

There may be opportunities to stop and discuss the choices children make for the scenarios. If the children choose an answer that shows less resilience, you can discuss why they have chosen that option and why the other options might be better to help them grow more.

Through the game, the children should begin to develop an understanding of resilience in common situations which they can then apply to their own lives. As they progress, they may want to create their own cards for the game.
